FARM FOR SALE.

JOHN CLARK FARM, Containing about three handred and fifty acres of land; two dwelling houses, three barns and two tenant houses, near the railroad track. The tenant houses are new. The large larin house has been thoroughly repaired and painted, with new plazza in front and end, new front fence, all in the most substantial and tasteful manner, making it is desirable residence. Nearly three-fourths of a mile of new water pipe from a never-falling fennosit supplies all the premises.

d OVER TWO THOUSAND DOLLARS has been expended within the past two years on buildings and fedoes, besides the tenant houses. The land is adapted to the ratisling of all kinds of crops. Some fifty acres are well adapted for tobacco. The land is now under a good state of cultivation, by naving been fed out a large amount of any and grain the basil two years, which has been brought on the place, besides that which the form has preduced. The eastern line is the connectent river and the farm lagring westerly, divided into pasture and tiliage land, with a sufficient supply of wood for the premises, Simmerla so near the rillage of fieldows Falls—a village growing more rapidly than any piace within the State, and with its unlimited water power, which is tast being improved, must continue to therease in a still larger proportion in the future—makes it the most desirable farm in these parts. Possession given immediately, except the mill yard, and that in one year. Inquire of the subscribers on the premises; or Joseph Wilson, tirm of J. Antoine Wiertz. STORY OF A MARVELLOUS GENIUS - A CHILD-

The extraordinary paintings as well as the sculptures, in the aWiertz gallery are all the work of one hand—that of Antoine Wiertz, son of a tailor in the Ardennes. The tailor had been a soldier and entertained a dream of glory. He transmitted the fire of nis ambition to the son, where it became a steady and consuming flame, burning with pure, clear light, and filling the boy's soul with a spirit which would have been appreciated grandly among the Greek stoics, but which seemed Quixotic in this practical nineteenth century. He might have lived in luxury by his art, but he preferred to live in abject poverty for his art. His therst for fame was insatiable—his contempt for fortune incredible. The story of his life is as curious and pathetic as the works of his genius are fantastic and unique Wiertz was born in 1806, in an old town of Dinant, on the banks of the Meuse. At an age when other children play, this child occupied himself with toys of art. He made drawings almost before he could run alone, and tried to color them with berry juices, plants, bits of clay. He carved carious figures with his jack-knife. One of the triumphs of his boyhood was a wooden frog, which he had cut with his knife, and which was so maryclous an imitation of the living creature that visitors to the tailor's shop tried to kiek the counterfeit reptile into the ARTIST.

creature that visitors to the tailor's short tried to kick the counterfeit reptile into the street.

A captain of gens d'armes who tried to pierce the wooden freg with his sword was so amazed by it that he talked about it everywhere he went, and the news coming to the ears of M. Paule Maibe, an art connoisseur at Dinant, he visited the boy, and became his patron in a small way; that is to say, he took him home, and had him taught music and drawing—for the boy had an aptitude for music too. The result was that at the age of fourteen Wiertz could teach his drawing master, not only, but had acquired a surprising facility at engraving, in and drawing master, not only, but had acquired a surprising facility at engraving, in which latter art he was entirely self-taught. He made wood-cuts of his own original drawings, and having made the cuts he himself printed from them; beside which he could play on some half-a-dozen different musical instruments, but of this art he made STOVES AND HOT AIR FURNACES. musical instruments, but of this art he made little or no use in after life. At so early an age as this the boy's soul became fired with a passion for Rubens, and his patron finally took him to Antwerp. There the kindhearted man did what he could for his little friend, found him excellent masters, and got him a pension of about fifty-six dollars from the king—and left him to make his way. On this patry sum the boy lived, practising the most rigid economies. He had no pleasures, no occupations outside his art. In one of his letters to his mother, to whom he was tenderly devoted all his life. art. In one of his letters to his mother, to whom he was tenderly devoted all his life, he wrote, "Except for food I hardly spent two farthings." His lodging was his studio, and that studio was a miserable corner in a granary, without fire and without lights at evening, the roof so low that as his stature increased he could not stand upright in it, but went about stooping. Here he wrought all day long on the paintings which he already designed to open the door of fame, and in the darkness of night either went out and studied, or remained in his den, and solaced his loneliness with wild, weird music.

In winter, in the incensest cold, he worked still, almost without ceasing, in a sort of ecstacy, as wretched in his intervals as a ecstacy, as wretched in his intervals as a beggar, as happy in his sublime passion for art as any king, or better, as any lover. For six years he so dwelt and so lived, and in his scorn of physical comfort—not to speak of luxuries, pleasures—was as stoical as Diogenes. If he could have painted in a tub, he would have lived in a tub. Tempting offers were made him to paint for money, but he would not. To one connoiseur who offered him a large sum for one of his offered him a large sum for one of his studies, Wiertz made a reply worthy to live among the celebrated speeches of genius. "Keep your gold," he said, "it is the mur-derer of art." This sentence strikes the key-note of this remarkable man's anthem of life. He would never sell his works. Hence the gallery at Brussels to-day is crowded with the efforts of his fanciful and grotesque genius, while out in the world you would seek in vain for one of his pictures. Portraits form the only exception to this statement, for portraits he painted now and then throughout his life as "pot-boilers." To the day of his death he adhered firmly to the programme which he laid down when the programme which he laid down when he was twenty, as the only noble one for artists—for Wiertz wrote also, much and well, about the art he loved so passionately. "In an epoch when mechanism is preferred to expression," he said, "one must have courage enough to imitate the great Poussin. courage enough to imitate the great Foussin, and paint for posterity; and, struggling always against bad taste, know how to remain poor, in order to remain a great artist."—

"There is but one method," said Sydney Smith," and that is hard labor; and a man who will not pay that price for distinction, had better at once dedicate himself to the had better at once dedicate himself to the pursuit of the fox."

"Have you ever entered a cottage, ever traveled in a coach, ever talked with a peasant in the field or loitered with a mechanic at the loom," asks Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton, "and not found that each of those men had a talent you had not, knew something you knew not? The most useless creature that ever yawned at a club, or creature that ever yawned at a club, or counted the vermin on his rags under the sun of Calabria, has no excuse for want of intellect. What men want is not talent, it is purpose; in other words, not the power to achieve, but the will of labor. I am no believer in genius, but I believe that labor, judiciously and continuously applied, be-comes genius."
